INTERNATIONAL wildlife photographer David Boag was in Dundee on Saturday to help celebrate International Biodiversity Day.

He has been touring the region for the Tayside Biodiversity Festival, lecturing and giving workshops.

He was the guest of Sensation, the city's science centre.

It was offering a range of hands-on activities demonstrating the variety of life, from trees, insects and birds to people.

His morning talk was on the subject of Capturing the Natural World With Your Camera.

Later he took visitors on a photographic adventure, an African safari, followed by a wildlife photography workshop for older children and adults.
